OUTRIGGER BANNER CONSTRUCTIONS

Outrigger banners are suspended from banner poles mounted on the face of a building.

A rectangular shape is appropriate for a pole parallel to the ground.

An angled cut along the top of the banner may be required if a pole is already in place.

Measure pole angle to determine the necessary corresponding banner angle.

CONSTRUCTION OPTIONS

Sand Pockets

are used to prevent a flag or banner from wrapping itself around an outrigger pole and to keep it hanging straight. Pockets are heavily reinforced with stitching and sewn closed at the top or left open with Velcro closures for those who wish to fill the sand pocket on-site.

Non-Tangle Rod Patches

are used in conjunction with non-tangle rods to prevent a banner from wrapping around a pole.

Grommet Patches

are used as a tie-down point, connecting the banner to a point on the surface of a building.

Air Pockets

are reinforced, zig-zag stitched ports sewn through all layers of a banner and cut open to allow air flow through the banner when hung.

OUTRIGGER BANNERS MANUFACTURING METHODS

- Sewn and Appliquéd on Nylon Fabric
- Printed Dye-Sublimation on Polyester Fabric

VELCRO PANELS

Velcro panels are often used in conjunction with outrigger banners to convey dates or messages that may change with regard to specific events.
